

Strategic Planning & Management Consulting Capability

Acquisition & Logistics Support

Employing proven project control best practices

The federal acquisitions and procurement program offices within any given agency continually strive to acquire quality goods and services while maintaining stringent budget limitations.

The current financial environment has set a new benchmark and federal contracting officers are tasked with maintaining compliance to the Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR), vigilance to cost control, and ensuring that only quality goods and services are purchased for the federal government.

As a result, a new trend is taking place within the federal procurement programs. Funds are allocated towards competitive salaries, thus ensuring that only quality contracting officials are hired within the organizations. Most administrative and financial support positions are now being contracted out to private industry.

Catapult Technology's Acquisition & Logistics Support services provide administrative support, financial guidance, and overall program control oversight to the Federal acquisitions environment.

How It Works:

You require successful program control, administrative support, and oversight. Catapult's program management experts have a proven track record in delivering efficient and effective administrative services at a high level of customer service.

We also have significant project management experience in managing projects with a wide range of scope and complexity. Catapult staff possess strong interpersonal relationship and communication skills and a thorough understanding of the need to achieve customer satisfaction through quality and timely service.

Additionally, Catapult provides Project Management Office (PMO) support to ensure that you have proper control and governance structures in place. Our services are grounded in best practices established by the Project Management Institute (PMI). In fact, Catapult requires that all of our project managers are certified by PMI as Project Management Professionals (PMPs).

Catapult staff are knowledgeable with the FAR and Federal Acquisition terminology and processes. More importantly, our staff is proficient with the Microsoft Office products which enable our on-site personnel to deliver products and briefs which are professional and thorough in presentation.
